I think you figured this out, but Neil Glazer. My firm is Kohn, Swift & Graf, P.C. In Philadelphia. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] I have been watching, learning and speaking with people for a year. I don't know if litigation is the best approach, still have much to learn and figure out, but I want to help these people anyway I can, in the courts or elsewhere. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] If I can destroy this guy, take his world down, I will gladly do it. If I can redistribute the Bronfman sisters' fortunes to the victims, I will do that as well. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Some of this will not be easy, we have to do a lot of hard work, and need to make some new law, and it will require my firm to invest many millions, but it can be done and I am acutely interested. And as I said, litigation is only one option. He can be taken down.

I've been given the green light to more actively pursue legal angles, civil and criminal. [REDACTED]

If all I do is on the criminal front, I won't charge. If there is civil litigation, nobody pays up front, we put in the time and cover all expenses; if and when there is a damages award or settlement money, the clients agree to the lawyers taking a fixed percentage.

I implore you to please take down the post. [REDACTED]

We represent dozens, growing by the day. The criminal investigation is massive and the civil action will be unprecedented. That is soon. I will give you first view before we file. [REDACTED]

Cami has been interviewed. She is not testifying for Raniere. FBI victim services are in contact with her to make sure she knows they will help her to get help. No, she has not fully come forward, but she has been willing to stay in contact with them and the fact is they don't need her testimony to prosecute and convict Raniere for what he did to her. Moira told me, and this is a quote, "we have all the evidence we need."
